Sustainability and Community Investment

At COMO Hotels and Resorts, we act as custodians, rather than managers, of each destination. We recognise the privileges and responsibilities of being part of the community and are committed to celebrating local culture, supporting the domestic economy and minimising our impact on the environment.

At COMO The Halkin, we are firmly focused on corporate citizenship, and have forged relationships with community partners to foster our core values of health and wellness. Among these, we are proud to work with The Felix Project, a local non-profit organisation which collects fresh, nutritious food and distributes it to charities who are able to feed undernourished and vulnerable people in the city.

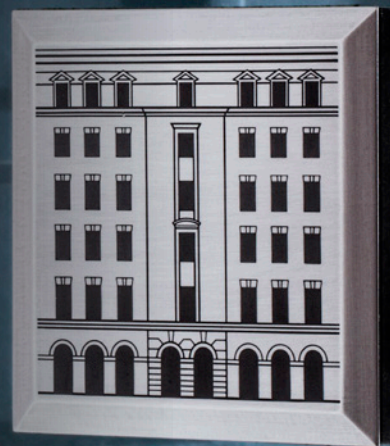

To keep our ecological footprint light, we work closely with small-scale producers to source seasonal and local ingredients from around the UK to supply our kitchens. Furthermore, any residual cooking oil is collected by an external company to be converted to biofuel.
